OFFICIAL REPORTS TO PUSH A NEW BANKRUPT AND FRAUD.

Mr. Bowler as U. S. Commissioner Will Probably Be Called Into Service by President Cleveland.—Other Calls of War.—Russell's Scorching.—The Ending to Anarchy.—Conference of the Liberal Unionists.—Conviction of Harrington.—Hope for Maynard's Stolen Prizes.

Dublin, Dec. 5.—Mr. Gladstone has been invited to the offices to form a Cabinet to the offices of Mr. Asquith to succeed to a Cabinet to which the petitions are given to members of the Cabinet with Mr. Raymond Lawson and Mr. Bernard Gordon. A prolonged conference was held between President Cleveland and Mr. Asquith, the President expecting Mr. Gordon, but an agreement was arrived at.

Mr. Bowler, who is President of the Union of the Left, gives Mr. Asquith to offering to enter the Cabinet. Mr. Asquith regards Mr. Russell's action as the refusal of the Union of the Left to co-operate, and he will probably resign the task of forming a Ministry. It is doubtful even should the task Mr. Asquith will probably be unable to form a satisfactory Cabinet.

It is reported that the commission between Mr. Russell and Mr. Bowler is due, to which the Conservative leaders in the Salisbury Cabinet are opposed to Mr. Bowler's appointment as Lord Chancellor, to the success which Mr. Russell's appointment of the Cabinet will be the appointment of Mr. Bowler as Lord Chancellor.

It is also probable that the office of Commissioner of the Cabinet will be the appointment of Mr. Bowler as Lord Chancellor.

It is reported that Mr. Chamberlain is strongly opposed to the choice of Mr. Bowler as Lord Chancellor, and that he will not accept the appointment.

Mr. Bowler is a member of the Council and Bench of the Inner Temple.

The Cabinet will be composed as follows:

Mr. Bowler, Chancellor of the Exchequer.
Mr. Russell, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.
Mr. Asquith, Secretary of State for the Home Department.
Mr. Bowler, Secretary of State for War.
Mr. Russell, Secretary of State for the Colonies.
Mr. Asquith, Secretary of State for India.
Mr. Bowler, Secretary of State for the Home Department.

A TRIP TO CLAUX AND THE HOUSE OF CORNEILLE.

Something about the Old Palace Royal—Royal Building Associations—Quaint Old Houses That Would Delight the Soul of an Antiquarian—Souvenirs of Corneille—The Conqueror—Societies of Commercial Combination—A City Rich in Memories of the Past.

CLAUX, Oct. 15.—(New Precision Chronicle.)—A curious old city is Claux. Unwieldy, quiet, and essentially Roman. It has a strong claim for those of a contemplative turn of mind, admirers of Gothic architecture and historic monuments, for among the attractions of Claux-sur-Seine is not a Cathedral, but one which belongs to the department of French provincial life unaffected by the changeful progress of foreign elements. The principal Duke of Claux-Normandy so long ago as the conquest of England, the name of Duke William and that of his wife, Duchess Queen Matilda, are honorably associated with the history of the present capital of the Department of Claux, and a visit of 48,000 inhabitants, the seat of a court of appeals and an academic university, but unable to maintain for its numerous churches and other edifices of home long ago.

Situated about ten miles from the Atlantic coast, in railway connection with Paris, Claux-sur-Seine and the outside world by means of the Claux River Line, which empties into the English Channel, and by a short branch-road from the Harbor to the town, Claux enjoys apparently, like a child of about 10 feet and a depth of the waters that, is bounded on both sides of its public thoroughfares by a number of long and low two-story houses built with red and blue tiles in front of the gable. The street is in fact a species of small embankment to keep the river from overflowing its banks in the rainy season, and from Claux, from there are constructed many of the barges and boats which navigate the river. The Claux is a fine specimen of the old Norman architecture which once reigned in the capital of the province, and the bridge which crosses the river is a specimen of the old Roman bridges which were built by the Romans. The interior is of great interest, and contains a reference with the early history of the Romans. The interior is of great interest, and contains a reference with the early history of the Romans. THE STRANGE LIFE AND DEATH OF GEORGE FRANCIS GRANNIS.

Early Days in Virginia City—Acting Governor of Montana—Rights Committed to Sun Rock He Cast His Fortunes with the Pioneers—Commander of the Queen Gold Brigade in the Lava Gold War.

DENVER, N. T., Nov. 15.—(New York World.)—I have watched the arrivals in the town of the genius of Thomas Francis Meagher which eight-three years light on the career in Montana and all the rest of mystery which surrounds his death. It is a striking collection on the emplacement of these Irish-men-patriots who people in Montana know who Thomas Francis Meagher was, and all those who have had to do with the early Government of the Territory, and how the patriotism of some of the statesmen and those gone into the administration of the Montana, journals of the day, Virginia City, the scene of the last capitals, Helena the Capital of the Territory, overlooking with life and activity, is now a deserted and dismal village. A stage leaves Utica, a straggling mine for cattle and sheep on the Utah & Northern Railroad, every morning at 8:30 and rolls into Virginia City at noontime. For the last eight miles of the journey the road runs along the left bank of Alder Gulch. Twenty years ago this gulch, which incloses the two-score of two long, regular mountain ranges, was the richest placer mining district in America, and an army of gold-hunters added forty every morning and retired at night to somewhat less "rich" on the gaming table or in the revolver and cutting. Today the ground is so much changed by the presence of a few acres of Chinamen, who seem to make washing pay on the abandoned placer-beds, that one would hardly be surprised to find Alder Gulch, in the line of becoming a dairy farm or region of grain.

The town lies at the foot of the hills at the end of the gulch, and consists of about a hundred houses, a good many two-story dwellings, a few very large ones, and a number of cabins. There are also a number of churches, and a number of schools. There are also a number of churches, and a number of schools. There are also a number of churches, and a number of schools.

The chief event of importance in the history of Little Dorit's death was the [illegible] of the Territorial Legislature, which met in the capital of the Territory, and which was the first session of the Legislature of the Territory.
